January: During the month of January the snow was used for drinking water and for other household use. The snow was gathered in buckets and melted on the hot wood stove inside the hogan. Sometimes an outside fire was built and a huge barrel was placed over an iron grill and the snow was melted in large quantities. The Navajos named the month of January melting or cooking the snow, Yas Nilt'ees. The snow naturally began to melt towards the end of the month.

Parents: Have your child access the Google Classroom on their laptop for those days when the school will be on virtual. Thank you.
